amendment in accordance with his suggestion. Alderman Gullbert seconded this amendment. Alderman Cruickshank explained that he had always opposed any bill to suspend Mr. McKim's discharge from duty. (The crowd murmured and groaned.) "I have not changed my mind," he declared for the last twelve years. He, however, thought Mr. Ross should now state it without further delay. "I was aggressive in wanting the removal of McKim," he said, "but I am not in favor of any further action. Alderman Sparks took objection to the wording of the motion. When he was required was the removal of the amendment, I was obliged to withdraw it. I am not in favor of the chain-laws for the works. No man wanted to see the glassworks put out of existence. He thought the matter would ultimately go for a jury, and I am not in favor of that." After a brief discussion, the amendment proposed by Alderman Bennett was carried on the following division, viz: For: Alderman Bennett, Graham, Jackson and Lucas, and Culbert. Against: Alderman Jensen and Jones.

But I am not doing an injustice to "C. E. H." when he recommends the erection of wood stores of the well known eastern and western pattern of the city, may be that he has in view something quite picturesque in grandeur of design not only Morton's Hall, Jones and Melvin's new houses, but even the most impressive of these structures, the new residence of the manager of the Darling Harbor compensation-walls. We will see. Still to pass at the head of the crowd could be a very disagreeable experience, and I am sure that these prominent points. Indisputably they must be accommodations. Commercially they would bring about a noticeable interference with the fair and the pleasure of the people. The city would not be a very desirable place to berth along to take in their wool cargoes.

On the whole, Sir, I do not think that either "C. E. H." or the "Bishop of Riverina" are right. The proposed scheme, which, as a bold attempt to reduce the rates of stock and sheep, is in itself a very laudable one, is in itself inseparable from the present congestion of stock traffic in the city, has already been pointed out to you.

Yours, &c.,

IN FAVOR OF VITAE.

THE BISHOP OF RIVERINA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

SIR,—I have just seen an extract in a country paper for an article of yours on the "Bishop of Riverina," on which I must be in justice to the clergy at present because I do not think that the clergy are in any way to be held responsible for a few structures. You find fault with the people group of the lamentable want of "religious service" to the district," from the Murrambridges to the Darling Downs. It may be a Bishop of Riversdale should be of the same spirit and temperament as the popular Bishop of Melbourne, and that he should be able to exert a powerful and direct religious influence wherever he pitched his camp. A Bishop would be of much use to the Church and the country, for at present Church work in the bush is rather haphazard. I have no doubt that the Murrambridges and the Darling Downs are those of men who are not brought into contact with even the best of the clergy. I think you have made such an egregious mistake. With the district referred to there are no fewer than 12 ministers of the Gospel, and I think that there are not fewer than 100,000 people. There are not one hundred men who have not had the opportunity of attending Divine service if they were disposed to do so. There are not fewer than 100 men who have not had the opportunity for a month, and conduct service in the evening at a station or other centre, and then return to their occupations for another month to recruit and renew the work. At all events, I think that there are not fewer than 100 men who have not had the opportunity of attending Divine service if they were disposed to do so. These 12 ministers belong to the various Protestant Churches, and I think that there are not fewer than 100 men who have not had the opportunity of attending Divine service if they were disposed to do so. I know there is a disposition with some parties to regard the administration of cerwharfs which the Government would find it hard to justify, they had at least utilised that portion of quay space from Tenterfield to North Grafton, as Mr. Fawcett suggests, the cost would still be large, and the question would still remain whether it was wise to incur a large expenditure in constructing a railway to connect the interior with a port which "cannot be made such a port" as the northern districts are entitled to. Certainly the capabilities of the port ought to be placed beyond doubt before concluding to make a railway that would have to depend upon the port for the traffic it carried. Mr. Fawcett, in effect, agrees with us that it is the trade of the whole district for which provision should be made, and that such provision could only be made by causing the inland communication centre in a really safe and accessible harbour. In his view, such a harbour might be constructed at Cape Byron Bay, where vessels can even now lie safely during southerly and easterly winds, and from which point a line could be made by way of Lismore, Casino, and Tenterfield, with a loop-line to North Grafton to catch the trade of the Clarence. It is interesting to observe that while Mr. Fawcett, who writes from the Richmond, advocates the making of a northerly line, with a new port not far from our northern boundary as its terminus, the people of the Macleay contend that the New England trade should be brought down to Trial Bay, where a harbour is in course of construction. Between the extremes of these conflicting interests come the claims of Grafton, which have hitherto had priority of consideration, partly because stronger influences have been brought to bear in their support, and partly because the expenditure at the mouth of the Clarence has created the impression that some day a safe and always accessible port will be in existence there. The events of a course of years, however, have rendered the correctness of that impression very doubtful. It is not to be taken for granted that the port of the Clarence is or will be a port of such a character as to warrant its choice as the terminus of a costly railway, and it would be well for the Government to consider, before any further steps are taken towards the construction of a line from New England to the coast, that the question for settlement is not only what route should be followed, but where is the port to be taken as the terminus.

The changes in the wharfage arrangements at the Circular Quay and in the traffic of the neighbourhood, which are said to be under the consideration of the Government, need a great deal of consideration if the public interest is to be protected. A new Government may signalise its accession to power by prompt action; but it cannot establish claims upon the confidence of the public by taking hasty steps which must either be retraced or cause serious public inconvenience. Two objects are set forth in the changes referred to. The one is to provide additional shipping accommodation at the Circular Quay. The other is to lessen the dangers of the harbour steamers' traffic. The additional shipping accommodation that could be provided by wharves on the head of Sydney Cove would not be large. If it is proposed in anticipation of the great increase of commerce which the progress of a few years is almost sure to bring about, the scheme is inadequate and short-sighted. Any preparations to be made by the Government to meet the probable demands of the next decade would have to look in other directions, and be on a far larger scale. In the meantime the gain to be derived from providing berths for three more ships at the Circular Quay is not a sufficient ground for revolutionising the general arrangements for the harbour passenger traffic. It is said that the proposed disturbance would be in the interests of the harbour traffic, because the steamers which ply to and from the opposite sides of the Circular Quay now cross each other in their respective courses, and are therefore constantly under liability to collision. But that is only because under present arrangements steamers which go down the harbour and take an easterly course start from the western side of the Cove, and steamers which take a westerly course start from the eastern side. The necessity for crossing each other, and the consequent risk of collision, might be obviated, or at least greatly reduced, by simply exchanging the respective starting places. There is no necessity for shifting them to the two extremities of Sydney Cove at Dawes Point and Fort Macquarie. In the absence of necessity this shifting would be an unwarrantable interference with the public convenience, for Fort Macquarie and Dawes Point are far out of the way of traffic and facilities for it. The distance from the present jetties is nothing to the steamers and the people they carry; but it would be a serious matter to the passengers who would have to traverse it by land. To remove the terminus of the North Shore traffic to Dawes Point would be to inflict a heavy penalty in time or money or fatigue upon thousands. The idea appears to be that the inconvenience (which cannot be denied) may be mitigated by the extension of the tramway system. But why go to the expense of making tramways, and put people to the cost and trouble of using them, for the purpose of lessening an inconvenience which might be avoided altogether? And besides that, it is not easy to see how the suggested tramways could be made and worked without causing much hindrance to traffic and much danger. Of all places in the city, perhaps, except George-street itself, the road around the Circular Quay is the least suitable for the safe working of a locomotive street railway system. It is the place of a large traffic of heavy and cumbersome loads—a comparatively unmanageable traffic. A locomotive cab may get out of the way of a horse-drawn cab at short notice, but not so a heavily laden wagon or a dray with timber. There would either be frequent stoppages or frequent collisions, or a frequency of both in turn. This danger would be increased by the construction of the new wharves, for the greater the shipping trade at the quay, the greater the disturbance which the introduction of an open railway in the midst of it all would cause. The tramway experiment is already beginning to present itself in a new light, as the increased expenditure is cutting down the supposed profits rapidly. The Government should think twice before extending the experiment under peculiarly unpromising conditions.

Dr. BARRY has followed the erroneous lead of a clerical brother in supposing that the Church has been held responsible for the existence of vice in the community, whereas the criticism passed was that neither Church nor State separately, nor both together, show themselves at present equal to the task, and the question that was put was to be that critical survey of the facts was. Can anything else be done, and if so, what, and how, and by whom? Dr. Barry's view is that a disestablished Church is in no way a part of a State organisation, which may be readily admitted. But the same will not hold true of an Established Church, or of ministers taking State pay for the promotion of religion. His view is that the Church is primarily for the sake of its own members, that all are invited to join, but that if they will not, the Church is not in any way accountable for them, or to be blamed for their not joining, any more than a temperance society is to be held responsible for drunkenness, or a university for men who cannot sign their names. The Church, being a voluntary association of faithful men, has nothing to do with the faithless. But the Church, in this colony, she is failing as a political institution, is still a social and religious institution, and though not made responsible for members outside the fold, may be counted on for some aggressive action on the social and religious side. Its action is far better than that of the State, and therefore more to be desired. The State can only be repressive, and deal with overt acts. It can shut up public-houses and disreputable houses; it can punish drunkenness and profligacy. But religious action is deeper, and reaches the springs of action. It teaches self-restraint, and by making the heart pure makes the life pure. That is why every practical moralist looks first to the Church as the most effective agent; and though some of the clergy have resented this view, and have asked, "Why should we be held responsible, why should we be expected to succeed where the State fails?" the members remain true that the best way to attack social maladies is to go to the cause, and not merely to repress the symptoms. It would really seem as though some persons outside the Church thought better of it than some persons inside. Meanwhile can nothing be done to help the State? It is a question which would find treatment by of any service? Could they be identified, tracked to their homes, reconverted with privately, shifted to new scenes and better surroundings?

The Hon. Ivo Bligh's expressed intent to gather up the ashes of English cricket strown in Australia has so far been fulfilled. He has beaten the provincial eighteens and the colonial eleven, and in two out of three test matches has come off victorious. When, after the Australian Eleven. The victories have been as complete as unexpected. It was thought and maintained by competent critics at the start that the two representative teams were so evenly matched that victory would be practically decided by the preliminary toss. The first match, however, brought about a change of opinion. The Australian showed such superior form that an opinion went abroad to the effect that "the Englishmen are no match for them, we may count upon three victories, and the cricket championship of the world." The second match quashed all such predictions, rubbing salt in the Australian's wounds, and leaving a clean page for the final contest. And now, that contest being ended, we acknowledge an all-round defeat, but naturally look about for the causes which have produced it. The first to appear is the loss of the toss. The Englishmen won that chance and went in to a magnificent cricket. The Australians began their uphill fight upon sudden turf in drizzling rain, and played at a disadvantage throughout the innings, yet still contrived to come within 29 runs of the first score of their opponents. In the second innings the Englishmen were a wicket unpurged by play, and were demoralised by rain, and were disposed of for the mean total of 123. Then it was thought Australia had a chance. Only 153 runs to win! MURDOCH and BARNESMAN alone might accomplish so much, but MURDOCH and BARNESMAN, with all their fellows, went for a trifling score, the number required, leaving the Englishmen victorious by well nigh half an innings. There is much to plead in extenuation of such a result. The Englishmen had an innings with every circumstance in their favour. The Australians played their first in a slough, their second on a claypan. The toss was won by the English, according to cricket regulations. Other causes of course arise around the defeat (what defeat was not the source of many rumours). We know that the Englishmen prepared for the battle by much discipline and patient self-denial. It is said that the Australians denied themselves capable of living pleasantly, and yet winning gloriously. If so, they will have learned a lesson which should prevent a similar error in the future. It is fortunate that we shall have another chance. The English team stands pledged to meet another Australian eleven, and in that contest, if proven ability is backed by perseverance and discipline, we may hope for the victory, which has now been so unexpectedly snatched away.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The formation of a new French Ministry has been nearly completed. The task was offered to M. Jules Ferry, and declined by him; it was then entrusted to M. Fallieres, who has succeeded in forming a coalition Ministry. The members of the late Ministry, with the exception of M. Ducloux and General Billot, have accepted portfolios under M. Fallieres. The offices of War and Marine are not yet filled, although the first message received made it appear that the post of Minister for War had been accepted by M. Thibaudin. The debate was taken place on Monday night in the Chamber of Deputies on the question as to the propriety of expelling from the country all members of ex-reigning families, was of an uneventful character. It is understood that the new Ministry will support the compromise proposed by the committee appointed to consider the question, which was that the members of the army or navy should be expelled and declared incapable of performing any public function, the question of their expulsion being left to the Government.

Mr. Bradlaugh intends again to assert his right to a seat in the House of Commons, on the opening of the Imperial Parliament, and anticipates that he will be expelled on his claims by a large number of Londoners.

The first portion of the Garonne's meat has been sold in London, and realised 5d. per lb. for beef, and 6d. for mutton.

The usual meeting of the Executive Council was not held yesterday, owing to the absence of his Excellency the Governor from town. It is probable that the next meeting will be held at the vice-regal summer residence at Mosman in the course of a few days.

In the Legislative Assembly yesterday, Mr. Levis gave notice that he would today (Wednesday) move that the House do adjourn until Tuesday next, his object being to afford him, members an opportunity of attending the opening of the railway to Armidale.

The answers to questions asked by members of the Assembly are occasionally so long and so full of statistics that much time is unnecessarily lost by Ministers having to read them. In consequence of this the Speaker has suggested that the information desired in such cases should be sought for in the shape of a return.

The Legislative Assembly deserves credit for the promptitude with which it has this session generally got through the business on the notice paper. Yesterday afternoon, after the completion of this task, the whole of the paper was cleared, and the House adjourned at 21 minutes past 4 o'clock. Both vessels were becalmed in the neighbourhood of Hogle Bay, and the sheep were crowded on the decks, and many of them were killed by the rain and cold. The Heather Bell was wrecked on the rocks, and the Hiram was driven ashore, and the sheep were landed at Hogle Bay in a weak and sickly condition consequent upon their sufferings during the voyage. They could not stand through being wet and cold, and died in numbers. The Blistons, also with sheep for the Robe River, was similarly unfortunate.

WOLLONGONG AGRICULTURAL SHOW.
[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

WOLLONGONG, TUESDAY.
The Wollongong Agricultural Society about 20 years ago was a flourishing institution and held some good shows, but through lack of enterprise on the part of the residents it gradually lost support, and eventually in 1871, when the Wollongong Show was formed, it ceased to exist. It is now being revived, and the people of Wollongong thought that the principal town of Illawarra should make another effort to collect the produce of the district near the town. A new society was formed under the presidency of Mr. F. Woodward, and about 100 members were secured. The first show was commenced today. It was held on the town common, east of the racecourse.

The improvements made to the town were numerous, and the show was a success. THE INTERNATIONAL CRICKET MATCH.
ENGLAND V. AUSTRALIA.
TUESDAY—FOURTH DAY.

The great contest between the Hon. E. B. Light's team of English cricketers and the Australian Eleven was brought to a termination yesterday on the Association Cricket Ground, the result being a somewhat surprising victory for the English representatives, who won by 69 runs. Owing to the early hour, viz. 11 o'clock, at which the game commenced, the match was concluded before half-past 1 o'clock. As only 120 runs were required by the Australians to win the match, and even if the task were accomplished, it would not have taken more than three hours at the slowest rate of scoring, the management did not see fit to publish the proceedings, and bring the match to a close. The game commenced, as usual, at noon, the match being held over early enough to give Mr. Blyth and his team ample time to catch the steamer for Queensland at half-past 7 o'clock, and the receipts would have been double what they were. Just before lunch, when the game had reached a somewhat desultory stage, the English got only to learn that the match was over. As it was, there were about 6000 persons present, the grand stand being very liberally patronised. After the stumps were drawn the people walked about the grand stand enclosure, scarcely realising that the game could be over.

The result of the deciding encounter is extremely disappointing to the public, who, nevertheless, bore the reverse with composure. We have been justly proud of our cricketers and their deeds in the old country, and our briefly enjoyed honours, won in many a well-fought contest in the old country, have been wrested from us by an adventurous band of cricketers, who heroically set out from England to take back with them the laurels which our representatives so lately brought with them to Australia. Mr. Blyth's team, composed of some of the best players in the world, were not only a credit to England, but a credit to the English cricketers, who have been so long in the habit of being beaten by the Australians.
